

Reach: Pushing Your Clinical Skills and Effectiveness to the Next Level

Workshop presented by U.S. Counselling Psychologist, Scott D. Miller, PhD

Over the last decade, Scott D. Miller, PhD, with colleagues at the International Center for Clinical Excellence, have been tracking the outcomes of thousands of clinicians around the world. Along the way, they have identified specific practices that separate highly effective from average clinicians. On average, they achieve 50 per cent better outcomes than their equally trained and credentialed peers. What's more, the best have much lower dropout rates and deliver better and more consistent outcomes across a range of client diagnoses, presenting complaints, and motivational levels.

Workshop objectives

In this workshop, participants will learn:

- three specific, evidence-based practices employed by highly effective therapists
- an empirically sound, yet clinician-friendly method for determining the effectiveness of your clinical work compared to your peers and national norms
- how to identify cases most at risk for dropping out of treatment or experiencing a negative or null outcome with you
- how to develop a profile of your most and least effective practices
- an evidence-based method for pushing your performance to the next level of effectiveness and efficiency.

About the presenter

Scott D. Miller, PhD, is a counselling psychologist and author, and co-founder of the International Center for Clinical Excellence, an international consortium of clinicians, researchers, and educators dedicated to promoting excellence in behaviour health. Scott conducts workshops and training around the world, and his research has been featured at the prestigious Evolution of Psychotherapy Conference.
