

Disability Counselling and Support

For people who have experienced violence, abuse, neglect and exploitation, and those affected by the Disability Royal Commission

We are continuing to safely support people during the coronavirus (COVID-19) crisis.

Who can use the service?

This free service is available to anyone who:

- identifies as having a disability and has experienced violence, abuse, neglect, or exploitation; and/or
- is affected by the Royal Commission into Violence, Abuse, Neglect and Exploitation of People with a Disability (the Disability Royal Commission) including people with disability, family, friends, carers, allies and support workers.

We would like to acknowledge the lived experiences of Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander peoples of the Stolen Generations and those who may have been affected by violence, abuse, neglect and/or exploitation. We welcome all Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander peoples seeking the support of this service.

What can we help with?

- Counselling support
- Access to interpreters and translation services, if needed to access the service
- Information around the impacts of trauma, and skills and strategies to manage these impacts
- Help to access other services
- Information about the Disability Royal Commission
- Support to decide if you want to make a submission

How can I access this service?

Our service can be provided over the telephone, via video-conferencing, or face-to-face at one of our centres across Victoria. Home visits may be possible under exceptional circumstances.

Disability Counselling and Support

For people who have experienced violence, abuse, neglect and exploitation, and those affected by the Disability Royal Commission

What is a disability?

A disability is a condition that gets in the way of your day to day functioning or wellbeing including:

- Physical: Hard to walk or move
- Hearing or sight: Hard to see or hear
- Intellectual: Difficult to think or learn
- Psychological: When emotions are painful and hard to live with

What is the Disability Royal Commission?

The Disability Royal Commission (DRC) is investigating ways to prevent and protect Australians with disability from experiences of violence, abuse neglect and exploitation. Through hearing the experiences of people with disability, their families, friends and allies, the DRC will make recommendations about how to improve laws, policies, structures and practices to ensure a more inclusive and just society. The DRC will run for three years, from 2019 to 2022.

For more information about the DRC, please visit disability.royalcommission.gov.au
